Syed Asir Hassan
Red Bull Wingfinder Report

syedasirhassan@outlook.com, completed December 18, 2025

What makes you unique, Syed Asir?

Every one of us is unique with different passions, strengths and goals. Knowing your strengths and how to best leverage them, along with what to watch out for, enables you to develop, grow and succeed.

Red Bull Wingfinder is a science-based personality assessment that helps you understand your strengths in the areas most influential for high performance at work.

Red Bull Wingfinder has 24 individual strengths grouped into four key areas. 30 years of psychological research carried out across thousands of scientific studies, have shown these four factors to be most influential for high performance at work.

Connections | Creativity | Drive | Thinking

Understand your strengths

Strengths influence the ways you're most likely to think and behave. They're your strongest personality preferences and what you rely on to succeed at work.

Using your Red Bull Wingfinder report, explore your strengths to better understand 'what makes you, you'.

Develop your strengths

High performance comes when you put in deliberate effort and practice to build on your strengths. Use these personalized resources to start turning your strengths into superpowers.

Coaching Plan

Hands-on activities

Red Bull Wingfinder E-Learning

Explore more online

Scan the QR code to access the resources to develop your strengths.

”

Based on this robust model of talent and a state-of-the-art scientific methodology, Wingfinder represents an unprecedented attempt to help millions of people identify and develop their career potential.

Dr. Tomas Chamorro-Premuzic, Chief Talent Scientist at Manpower Group and Professor of Business Psychology at University College London and Columbia University

Connections

Your CONNECTIONS measures how well you manage relationships and how well you work independently.

You're comfortable meeting new people, going to networking events, and even in interviews. But you also like to spend time on your own and enjoy doing things independently.

You are Direct

Top strength

You're clear and honest in what you say but are only blunt if you have to be. There's directness to your communication style.

Direct — Diplomatic

You

On a good day you give clear and honest feedback

On a bad day you can find fault too easily

You succeed through

- getting your point across effectively
- being respectful of others
- your preference for negotiation

You are highly Autonomous

Top strength

You've got a very clear idea about how things should be done. You enjoy having the independence to really be yourself and take control.

Autonomous — Supportive

You

On a good day you enjoy working independently

On a bad day you can focus too much on your own needs

You succeed through

- staying focused on your deliverables
- doing what you believe in
- playing your part

You are slightly more Balanced than Emotive

You're good at dealing with stress. That doesn't mean you don't worry about things that matter, but you stay focused and measured.

Emotive — Balanced

You

On a good day you stay calm when stress levels rise

On a bad day you may not realise when others are stressed

You succeed through

- being rational about the challenges you face
- staying in control
- not being too laid back

You are highly Sociable

Top strength

Meeting people just comes naturally to you. You're happy to be the centre of attention, even when talking to groups of strangers.

Reserved — Sociable

You

On a good day you thrive on meeting new people

On a bad day you can find it hard to work alone

You succeed through

- your sociability
- building networks and relationships
- your enthusiasm

Creativity

Your CREATIVITY measures how original and innovative your thinking is, or how logical and analytical it is.

You're open-minded, often coming up with new and interesting ideas. You want a career that's about enjoying novelty and change, where you're not stuck in a routine.

You are Adaptable

You're excited by the degree of uncertainty the future holds. You're good at adapting to change and don't like to feel restricted to doing one particular thing.

Focused — Adaptable

You

On a good day you respond well to new environments

On a bad day you can take on too many tasks at once

You succeed through

- your adaptability to change
- your willingness to try something new
- your flexible thinking

You are Innovative

You stand out for your original thinking. You're always looking to find a new angle — an idea that no one's tried before.

Pragmatic — Innovative

You

On a good day you enjoy coming up with innovative solutions

On a bad day you feel constrained by routine

You succeed through

- your ability to innovate
- your lateral thinking
- your love of new ideas

You are Open to Experience

Top strength

You enjoy daydreaming and think originally. Open-minded and comfortable with change, you adapt well to new situations.

Classical — Open to Experience

You

On a good day you leap enthusiastically into the unknown

On a bad day you avoid repetitive tasks

You succeed through

- your intuition
- your flexibility
- your keen sense of aesthetics

Drive

Your DRIVE measures your level of ambition.

You're confident about what you can do and want to show people just how good you are. But you don't always see your fellow graduates as rivals and are happy when they get credit for their own achievements.

You are slightly more Modest than Confident

You're confident in yourself and your abilities but you realise that you're also human. You know what you're capable of and you're also realistic about your limitations.

Modest — Confident

You

On a good day you build confidence by having competence

On a bad day you could suffer from a lack of self-promotion

You succeed through

- knowing when to step forward and when to let others take the lead
- balancing your confidence with your cautiousness
- understanding what you're good at and focusing on those areas

You are slightly more Patient than an Achiever

You care about your studies and your future career, and will strive hard to work on projects you believe in. That said, you keep things in balance and have a healthy attitude to work.

Patient — Achiever

You

On a good day you are satisfied with what you have

On a bad day you are not always proactive enough

You succeed through

- keeping your life and work in balance
- managing your workload
- being energetic and enthusiastic at work

You are slightly more Relaxed than Disciplined

You care about consistency and details, but you don't lose sight of the bigger picture.

Relaxed — Disciplined

You

On a good day you are good at putting things in perspective

On a bad day you may leave tasks unfinished

You succeed through

- being dependable and consistent
- your ability to let go
- careful planning

You are slightly more Independent than Dutiful

While you feel a strong sense of obligation to deliver on key asks, you are also adept at self-directing your work. Your flexible approach means you are comfortable transitioning seamlessly between projects that require strict adherence to guidelines and those that demand initiative.

Independent — Dutiful

You

On a good day you are self-reliant and willing to take a stand

On a bad day you may seem resistant to listen to authority

You succeed through

- your ability to adjust to different project requirements
- your willingness to follow others
- your ability to self-manage your workload

Thinking

Your THINKING measures the abilities you draw upon when solving problems and ranges from Intuitive to Agile.

As a balanced learner you will generally learn new things as quickly as most others. You use both your prior learnings and logical reasoning skills to evaluate tasks, opinions and ideas which assists you in finding solutions.

You are slightly more Intuitive than Agile

You learn from both experience and theory. So while you think logically and rationally, you're not robotic in your approach.

Intuitive — Agile

You

On a good day you can be both analytical and intuitive

On a bad day you need to be deliberate when choosing problem-solving techniques

You succeed through

- remaining objective
- trusting your instincts
- understanding that the most simple solution is sometimes the right one

Your personal Coaching Plan

Your personal coaching plan focuses on your top 4 strengths. These top 4 strengths represent your strongest personality preferences and the areas that you are most likely to develop.

Your Top Strengths

You are Direct

You are Autonomous

You are Sociable

You are
Open to Experience

What are strengths?

Strengths are the ways you are most likely to behave – your strongest personality preferences. They are aspects of your personality that you use to succeed at work and as you rely on them you are more likely to start and continue developing them. High performance comes from shaping and expanding your strengths through concentrated effort and practice.

Your Strengths, Your Story

We all have our own unique strengths. Wingfinder focuses on the key factors for career success which have been identified by psychologists across thousands of scientific studies. What YOU DO to develop your strengths will make the difference.

Beware of the Dark Side

Every aspect of personality has its positives and negatives depending on the situation and being self- aware will help you succeed in your career. As your top 4 strengths are your most preferred way to behave, you may be overusing them, or there may be situations they may not be to your advantage, how they can be managed and developed is key.

You are Direct

You're clear and honest in what you say but are only blunt if you have to be. There's directness to your communication style.

Keep doing

Keep things simple. Your direct approach means you're easily understood and helps keep communications clear. Your success comes from focusing on the extent to which others are receiving your message rather than your ability to win the conversation.

Stop doing

You're not afraid to say what you think. Many people will appreciate your honesty, but be careful — it also has the potential to upset more sensitive colleagues. Timing is also of the essence — your message may be the right one but it won't be well received if it's delivered at the wrong time.

Start doing

Because your straight-talking approach might be too much for some people, try to balance what you say to avoid causing offence. Changing direct statements into questions will help your message to be better received.

Here are four ways to help you build on this strength

1. Learn to compromise
   Sometimes it's good to let others have their way. Compromise is important in relationships.

2. Think about others
   Think about the effects of what you're about to say or do. How will it make other people feel?

3. Turn your opinions into questions
   Turn your opinions into questions. This will let people really think about what you're saying.

4. Think about context
   Think about the context of each situation and consider what's appropriate to do.

You are Autonomous

You've got a very clear idea about how things should be done. You enjoy having the independence to really be yourself and take control.

Keep doing

Keep being yourself. Your independent spirit means you make decisions, you get things done and your career moves forwards.

Stop doing

You've got strong ideas about how things should be done, which is great. Be careful not to become too dominant though, as others need a chance to shine.

Start doing

The best idea in the room won't always be yours. Make sure you sit back and listen to other people, and respect their ideas.

Here are four ways to help you build on this strength

1. Listen to others
   Always listen to other people's opinions and consider them when making decisions.

2. Be attentive
   Pay close attention to how people feel, what they say and what they need.

3. Involve everyone
   Whenever you're in a group, incorporate other people's needs into what you say or do.

4. Think about the effect of your actions on others
   Focus on your goals but remember to think about the impact they have on others.

You are Sociable

Meeting people just comes naturally to you. You're happy to be the centre of attention, even when talking to groups of strangers.

Keep doing

Your natural extraversion and charisma are powerful gifts. Create and leverage your networks to bring people together to achieve great things.

Stop doing

Being sociable makes life more enjoyable for those around you. But try to keep a balance between nurturing your relationships and achieving your goals — not everyone shares your need for interaction.

Start doing

Benefit from your large network. Success is not only a function of what you know — it's who you know. Be deliberate and purposeful in how you work with others and nurture connections; often the greatest ideas are born out of collaboration.

Here are four ways to help you build on this strength

1. Help people find common ground
   Help people with opposing views see common ground by asking them to explain their thoughts.

2. Involve others
   If there's a sport or something you'd like to share with your colleagues, why not set up a team or club?

3. Make the most of your ability to get on with others
   Make sure your career brings you into contact with lots of people, whether colleagues, clients or customers.

4. Offer support and friendship
   Whenever new people join your organisation, make sure you're there to offer them support and friendship.

You are Open to Experience

You enjoy daydreaming and think originally. Open-minded and comfortable with change, you adapt well to new situations.

Keep doing

Keep sharing your imaginative perspective with others. You'll help them to see things a little differently and find new possibilities.

Stop doing

Don't let your passion for challenging the status quo put you in a position of constant confrontation. Use your skills of expression to your benefit by knowing when to share your progressive ideas and when to hold back.

Start doing

Start applying more focus and discipline to your pursuits. This will help bring your creative ideas to life more often.

Here are four ways to help you build on this strength

1. Play with your ideas
   Play with your ideas and share them openly with friends. You might come up with more ideas, or build on ideas in new ways together.

2. Use your self-awareness
   Use your awareness of your feelings to your benefit — making better decisions, for example.

3. Be inspired by your creativity
   Focus your time on artistic and intellectual interests, and let them inspire you.

4. Respect other viewpoints
   You can be quite open in your views, but be careful when it comes to challenging others — pick the right occasion for sharing your revelations.